Water Meter Supply Update

Manufacturing and supply chain issues continue to negatively impact the City's ability to acquire Sensus water meter products which are compatible with the City's Automatic Metering Infrastructure (AMI) network via the City's contract with Aqua Metrics. Aqua Metrics recently stated that there is now a 52-week lead time for the radio transmitters used to communicate within the City's AMI network and have not given any clear indications as to lead times for their meters.

While the City is waiting on the Sensus products, the Water/Wastewater Division has started purchasing and installing Neptune meters allowing for timely installations, eliminating the need to delay development. The Neptune meters do not currently communicate with the AMI network and must be read by hand each month. However, the Neptune meters are compatible with the AMI network and will be remotely read once radios are received from Sensus. The radio transmitters are sole-sourced and cannot be acquired through other means.

LCRA Rate Notification

The attached letter from the Lower Colorado River Authority (our wholesale power provider) describes new wholesale electric rates that are expected to change on July 1.

Our current rate is $40.80 per MWh. The new rate of $43.80 per MWh, which is a $0.003 increase per KWh. The average residential customer uses 750 KWh per month, and the rate impact on that average user would be $2.25 per month.

New City Hall Mailbox

The southwest corner of the City Hall parking lot now sports a new mailbox. We are transitioning from a PO Box address to a street address (1311 Chestnut) for City Hall mail. The proliferation of large packages being sent through the mail has created a struggle for the City Hall staff responsible for retrieving our mail from the Post Office, so we made the switch.

Subdivision Variances

Recently there have been a few requests for variances from the subdivision requirements. Planning Staff sent an email last week outlining the process and costs to the local land surveyors who regularly work in the area. In these instances, the owner/applicant is requesting to not follow an adopted subdivision standard at all. A warrant request is to modify an existing standard within the subdivision or development standards, that must be justified based on the three criteria established in the B<sup>3</sup> Code (Fiscally Sustainable for the City, Geographically Sensitive, and Authentic to Bastrop). When the warrant process cannot be applied, a zoning variance or subdivision variance is the correct route to request approval, from either the Zoning Board of Adjustment or the Planning & Zoning Commission. This allows the board/commission to consider hardship on a case-by-case basis. City Council has adopted fees for a Zoning Variance and Subdivision Variance in the amount of $3,681. The fee is based on the time and analysis required for each specific request. The fee for a warrant is $6, which is the base system technology fee as no other fee has been adopted for a warrant. The review for a warrant is at the staff level and if appealed to a commission or City Council, additional fees are charged for each appeal.

Noon Whistle

The iconic noon whistle, which sits on a tower behind a building on Spring Street, is located on private property. The property owner has asked that the tower be moved. We are working to honor the request but doing so is complicated by the fact that electric service to more than one property runs through the tower. The solution will require the acquisition of a public utility easement and discussion with the property owner about the design of the final product. We'll be working to establish a suitable new location for the whistle.

Overheard at City Hall

Season 2 Episode 3 of the Official Podcast of the City of Bastrop features guests Jaylen West and Dylan Judd, two of Bastrop's newest Police Officers. ## U.S. Supreme Court: City Flag Raising Program Violated the First Amendment

On May 2, 2022, the Supreme Court of the United States decided *Shurtleff v. City of Boston*, finding that the City of Boston (Boston) violated the First Amendment when it refused to allow a flag described as a “Christian flag” on one of its flagpoles outside city hall.

Boston has three 83-foot flagpoles outside of its city hall. Boston flies the American flag on one and the state flag on another. On the third flagpole, Boston usually flies the Boston flag, but it also allows third parties to hoist a flag of their choosing on the flagpole for the duration of flag-raising ceremonies that are held outside city hall. Most of the flags raised were of other countries, but also included flags commemorating groups or causes such as Pride Week and EMS workers. For years, Boston approved third-party flags and had never denied a single request until Harold Shurtleff, the director of Camp Constitution, asked to fly a Christian flag. Boston denied the request citing concerns that flying a religious flag would violate the Establishment Clause, which prohibits the government from endorsing a particular religion. Shurtleff sued.

Boston argued that flying flags from its third flagpole was government speech and Boston could deny Shurtleff’s request without violating the First Amendment. Shurtleff argued that because Boston had opened up its flagpole for citizens to express their own views, refusal to fly a religious flag was a violation of the First Amendment Free Speech Clause.

The Supreme Court found that Boston’s flag-raising program was not government speech and it violated the First Amendment when it denied Shurtleff’s request to fly a Christian flag. The Court acknowledged that there is a thin line between government speech and private speech when the government invites the people to participate in a program. In this instance, “Boston’s lack of meaningful involvement in the selection of flags or the crafting of their messages” led the court to “classify the third-party flag raisings as private, not government speech.”

Railroad Commission Proposes Emergency Prioritization Rules

The Railroad Commission adopted a rule relating to the prioritization of natural gas distribution during a curtailment event (i.e. when a gas utility determines that its ability to deliver gas may become inadequate to support continuous service to its customers on its system and it reduces deliveries to one or more customers). The rule prioritizes the needs of individual customers and electric generation customers during a natural gas utility curtailment event.
